Of Restrictions Near Campus

Some Park Signs Removed

By Jim Macknicki
Associate Editor

City of Cheney street crews began Wednesday morning removing a portion of the no parking signs which have ringed the campus since late September but further action on the parking resolution was put off Tuesday night pending the results of a committee report.

The Cheney City Council Nov. 20 voted to restore parking on both sides of J street between Sixth and Seventh and on the northeast side of G, H, and I Streets between Sixth and Seventh Street. The council also allowed parking on the southeast side of Seventh from Washington to F Streets but prohibited parking on the northwest side of the street.

Committee Appointed

At Tuesday night's city council meeting further changes in the parking regulations were considered but failed to receive majority approval. The council did select Mayor Gerald Blakley to appoint another committee to study the parking problem after the council could not reach a decision.

Blakley had said at the start the council should remove all restrictions and start fresh or leave the restrictions as they are. Councilman William Wynd agreed with Blakley but said that by allowing parking back on all the streets the city council would be defeating the original purpose.

Cheney Fire Chief Maynard Haskins, in speaking on the proposed change to allow parking on C Street between Second and Fourth, said the Fire Department had asked that parking be removed on one side on the narrow streets around the fire department.

Never Asked For

Haskins told the council the Fire Department is now being blamed for something they never asked for. "All we are concerned with is the removal of parking on one side of the street and back far enough from the corner to allow our trucks room to turn," he said.

City Councilman Al Ogdon then moved that all parking restrictions be removed except those necessary for emergency vehicles and those restrictions needed for the bike lane. Ogdon also suggested meeting with police and fire officials to determine where the parking restrictions were needed.

Councilman Tom Showalter backed Ogdon's motion and said that if all the parking restrictions were not removed the city council would be considering removing the parking restrictions on different streets each and every meeting.

Cars Cause Damage

Councilman Ray Hamel disagreed however and said, "I am concerned with cars circulating for a place to park as this causes wear and tear on streets especially doing the kind of driving a person looking for a place to park does."

Hamel said he did not feel obligated to maintain streets that are used by commuter traffic and that he would support lifting of restrictions if the street in question was not used by commuter traffic.

Councilwoman Virginia White then offered a substitute motion that would leave the restrictions as they now stand and to have the mayor appoint a committee to review all parking and traffic problems. Her motion passed throwing out further consideration of Ogdon's motion.

Showalter then moved to restore parking on the northeast side of C and D Streets between Second and Fourth. His motion failed.

Built By Eastern Professors

Homes From Recycled Materials

RECYCLED LIVING--Homes constructed by two Eastern professors and their families near Cheney, built from recycled materials. (Photo by Kelley McManus)

By Kelley McManus
Feature Editor

"Home" means different things to different people but to Dr. Flash Gibson and Dr. Michael Folsom, both of Eastern, home is a combination of Expo '74, Sacred Heart Hospital, the Armour Meat Packing Plant, and an old shed.

The two EWSC faculty members and their families are currently living on a 30 acre tract near Cheney in houses they constructed out of recycled materials.

The houses are held up by railroad beams which were salvaged from the Expo site in Spokane. Insulation for the structures is provided from styrofoam blocks obtained from the Armour plant, and water is pumped through a faucet rescued from the recently demolished Sacred Heart Hospital. Even the walls of the house were, until recently, an old shed.

The Easterner recently visited these two unique homes and interviewed the professors' wives, Mrs. Kathy Folsom and Mrs. Linda Gibson, about the trials of "recycled" living.

Alternate Way

"We were interested in finding an alternate way of living," explained Gibson. "We wanted to find a way of life that was more satisfying and sound than the type of life we found in the city."

"Another reason is that we were disturbed about the amount of waste materials that a typical person accumulates," added Folsom. "It seems incredible that each household should have two or three garbage cans lined up outside their house and that each week this garbage is hauled away and another pile of garbage is stacked up. What is really sad about this is that much of the 'junk' that people throw away is really quality material and is being unnecessarily wasted."

The Folsoms and Gibsons are currently occupying two small houses that are separated by a spacious area which will eventually be a "common" house, said (continued to page four)

Unscientific Report Like A Loaded Gun

Results from the faculty evaluation report "The Compass" should not be used as a form of student input when deciding faculty tenure.

The intended purpose of "The Compass" was clearly stated before the evaluations began last spring. The information was to be used as an unscientific but possibly useful tool for students in registering for classes.

Designers of the evaluation recognized weak points of such a project from the beginning. Therefore, the accuracy of "The Compass" was meant to be somewhat better than information obtained from erratic "what do you think of professor John Doe?"-type questioning during Tawanka dinner conversations. But by no means was it intended as a professional study with results to be used for or against faculty members.

Somewhat valid generalizations can be derived from "The Compass," but should not be used to manipulate a professor's career. As one faculty member probably overstated it, "to give the administration such an unscientific report as a means for deciding tenure is like giving an idiot a loaded gun."

"The Compass" should be considered only "published grapevine" and as such only as a tool in registering for classes.

If any one conclusion can be drawn from "The Compass," it is that the overwhelming majority of Eastern students like and respect their instructors.

Tenure Warranted

Tenure may not be a "sacred right," but to deny college professors such basic job protection gives educators less rights than most blue collar workers and any civil service employee.

The right to keep a college teaching position until judged incompetent is not an unreasonable proposition. Although some would have you believe faculty tenure is an "unconditional meal ticket to the state paycheck graveyard," such a view is extremely short-sighted.

Short-sighted when considering the constant evaluation college professors are subject to and the degree of insecurity an untenured faculty member has as compared to most Americans in the work force.

If a college professor is incompetent there is little he can do to hide his shortcomings. Every day he must meet room fulls of critical college students. There are several channels available for students and other critics to report an instructor's inadequacies.

There are few jobs where a person is as closely scrutinized as a college professor.

The untenured faculty member's job security compared to that of unionized blue collar worker or civil service employees is unjustified. This is not to say that a college professor is better than a United Auto Worker in Detroit but certainly the professor should not be treated as something less.

To tack a "six-month notice to fire" clause on the contracts of college professors is regressive reasoning with complete disregard to the value of higher education.

STUDENT VOICE -- Associated Students President Carol Worthington tells the Board of Trustees that results from "The Compass" should be used as a form of student input when decisions regarding faculty tenure are made.

For The Record

Dear Editor,

The lead story and an editorial in the Nov. 8 issue indicate that dormitory students will pay additional board and room fees next year because this year's academic calendar contains more days than we had planned on in setting this year's fees.

This creates a false impression, for which I will take the responsibility because I didn't do an adequate job of explaining the situation to the reporter who interviewed me.

I would like to set the record straight.

Next year's board and room rates will undoubtedly be higher than this year's rates, but only because of escalating food and labor costs, which make up more than 80 per cent of operating costs.

The Housing and Dining system will probably realize about $14,000 less net revenue this year than originally planned because of the extra days. The effect of this revenue short-fall will be that expenditures for furniture and equipment replacements and additions and building improvements in the amount of $14,000 will not be made this year (net revenue of the System is used for those purposes and for bond redemption; it can't legally be used for anything else).

Dormitory residents will be disadvantaged to the extent that furniture and building improvements are delayed, but they certainly won't be paying higher fees because of this factor. They are in fact paying less -- that's the whole point.

This year's board and room rates were set at $996 based on a calculation of 226 days times $4.41 per day ($2.39 per day for board and $2.02 for room). If the calculation had been based on 233 days at $4.41 per day, the board and room rate this year would have been $1,026 or $30 more than dormitory residents are actually paying.

Neil Returns

Mr. Editor,

Mr. Neil Sheehan's lectures may be tantalizing but it is unfortunate that he was again invited (and paid) to speak on campus.

With limited lecture funds, consequently a limited number of guest speakers, how can those responsible claim Mr. Sheehan's second invitation justifiable? They could have chosen from a multitude of speakers with credentials and offerings far exceeding those of Mr. Sheehan.

Paying almost any speaker to return one year later indicates those responsible are failing the student body.

If audience appeal is the explanation for Mr. Sheehan's consecutive invitations, perhaps we ought to forsake the others and invite Johnny Carson to do his monologue on campus for as many times as the lecture funds will allow.

Hopefully, next year, we will be spared the "Third Annual" Neil Sheehan lecture.

Nicotine Fix

Dear Editor:

After what happened to The Savage House Pizza Parlor I fail to see how anyone can object to the no smoking regulations at Fieldhouse concerts. If the Fieldhouse is a fire hazard it's a fire hazard, and no amount of craving for a nicotine fix will change that. If the person who wrote your editorial can't enjoy the concert without his cigarette I think he might start considering quitting.

Personally I am very pleased at the no smoking rule. It's a refreshing change to be free from the smarting eyes and odious cigarette smoke that a non-smoker so often has to endure.

Apparently the cigarette smoker, like so many others in our society, believes that his waste omissions disappear immediately with no affect on anyone near him.

As far as the "sit in your chair straight" atmosphere predicted at future concerts, that is absurd. If I were to rip off my clothes and dance naked in the aisles at a concert, it would not result in concerts being cancelled for violation of the smoking rule, and it certainly isn't "first grade" behavior. The fire wardens aren't going to care how straight you're sitting, only whether you're smoking or not.

LaNece R. Bryson
Biology Dept.

Editor's Note: The next Fieldhouse concert performer is going to have enough trouble trying to win the crowd's attention without competing with a strip show, LaNece. If you plan to treat us to such a show at the next concert, at least you won't have to worry about getting your bare skin burnt by a cigarette butt.

Bone Pickin'

Dear Editor:

Students in general somewhat wonder how the governmental process works at EWSC but they are never told. It ceases to amaze me, when I ask a question that it is all but impossible to receive an answer.

We the students, pay tuition to attend the institution and find that some of it is used to pay elected AS officers. $175 a month for what, I ask. I have on one occasion spoken to the president in regard to scheduling more political speakers on the campus and was told that she would let somebody else take care of it as it was not her responsibility.

The administration wonders what it can do to attract more students and then when a student has a question, it is all but impossible to receive an answer. Nobody in the AS offices knows the answers to the questions that are asked of them but then expect the 6000 students to still pay their salaries of $175 a month for the president and two vice presidents.

Not only are the students being taken but they have little if any say in the governmental process. I had one occasion to use a SCAN line but before I could make the call, I was told that the line is used only for official school business. What is "official school business?"

Professors at EWSC think that they are gods because they are doing the student a favor for being there. I firmly feel that some of the professors are not worth the paper that their checks are written on. Many students would prefer the atmosphere of an institution that takes an interest in them and I for one say that EWSC is the over growth of a normal school and no more.

The only reason I'm attending is the fact that I need the credits this quarter, but as far as atmosphere and entertainment, EWSC is one school that is no more than an overgrown kindergarten and so are some of the professors that teach there.

If the newspaper represents all the students like they say, then they should not feel bad about printing such true thoughts of many students.

No Changes Necessary To Meet Energy Crisis

By Jim Macknicki
Associate Editor

The energy crisis will not necessitate changes in Eastern's winter quarter schedule, President Emerson Shuck announced this week.

Prior to Shuck's announcement, Eastern administrators had been considering a number of alternatives to reduce the institution's energy consumption.

Four Day Week

Three of the alternatives suggested included (1) going to a four day week, (2) increasing the length of classes from 50 to 60 minutes and thereby reducing the number of days in winter quarter by one sixth and (3) delaying the start of winter quarter by one week to one month.

Shuck's announcement came on the heels of President Nixon's national TV and radio address that home heating oil would be rationed starting Jan. 1 and that there would be a 15 per cent reduction of gasoline deliveries to wholesale and retail dealers.

In making the announcement, Shuck said, "the college's efforts will be devoted to laying plans which will be necessitated by the shortage of fuel."

According to Shuck, the decision to go ahead with winter quarter as scheduled was reached after it was determined energy consumption would not be substantially lowered by going to one of the alternate plans. Shuck cited increased use of energy sources by students going home and by their increased usage of energy while at home.

Significant Savings

Director of Physical Plant Robert DePoe said Nov. 21 that from the standpoint of energy conservation as far as the college is concerned the four day week is the way to go. "We would save the amount of energy and fuel required to support one academic day (per week)," DePoe said. "This could be a real and significant savings."

DePoe said had the four day week been instituted the temperatures of 13 buildings on campus would have been lowered to 55 degrees during the three days each week they were not occupied.

Eastern currently relies on natural gas and heating oil to run its heating plant. DePoe pointed out the supply of natural gas may be cut off by Washington Water Power Company at any time the temperature falls below 27 degrees and stays there. When cut off from the natural gas supply the college relies on fuel oil and maintains a 75,000 gallon reserve which would last about six days.

Oil Shortage

DePoe said that whether Eastern runs out of oil depends on the availability of number two oil (diesel fuel). "The supply of number six oil, which the college uses, is adequate but the problem is in getting it here. It does us no good in Cut Bank, Montana," Depoe said.

The Eastern furnaces consume 9,600 gallons of fuel on an average day and require a load and a half from a tanker truck each day.

One Washington community college has partially switched to the four day week with plans of switching entirely to the four day week with the start of winter quarter.

BBCC Plan

Ted Roshier, dean of instruction at Big Bend Community College in Moses Lake, said last week that many of their vocational programs have gone to four days and the college will switch entirely to a four day week winter quarter in an effort to conserve energy.

Roshier said the problem came to a head in November when they ordered 18,000 gallons of fuel oil but only received 8,000 gallons. Roshier estimated the college would save approximately 25 per cent on fuel oil and added the savings on electricity would also be substantial.

Some problems with scheduling were experienced at the beginning, Roshier said, but the reaction now from students, staff and faculty has been positive. "We feel good about making the decision now rather than having to do it in three or four days by a governor's directive," he said.

Continued Work

Although Eastern will not go to the four day week or institute any one of the other plans put forward, Shuck said the college will continue to work towards a reduction in the consumption of energy and that other possibilities are being considered.

One of those possibilities is the closing of Pearce Hall winter quarter. Shuck emphasized the closing of Pearce is just being considered as a possibility but pointed out "the way to save energy is to take something off the lines."

Pearce Hall is currently at 59 per cent capacity and houses 259 students. Fred C. Heinemann, director of food and housing, said Tuesday that should Pearce Hall be closed down space would be available in the other dorms for the displaced students but that a lot of single rooms would be lost.

Nothing Definite

Heinemann, like Shuck, emphasized that nothing definite has been decided and the closure of Pearce is just being discussed as a possibility. Heinemann did say that he along with two other administrators were opposed to the closing of a residence hall because of the impact on the residents displaced.

According to Heinemann, Pearce was mentioned for possible closure because of the low occupancy of the building. Only Dryden Hall, at 58 per cent has a lower level of occupancy but Dryden is a single room hall.

Washington State University officials said Tuesday they will close a dorm at the start of winter semester due to the energy crisis but the other four year state colleges said they had no plans to close residence halls.

Class Offers Trip

Eastern students have the opportunity to participate in the Model United Nations Convention to be held at the Portland Hilton this spring by registering for political science 150 during winter quarter.

"Practical Politics," instructed by Professor Ernst W. Gohlert, will meet three times a week to provide instruction for Eastern's delegation to the convention.

Eastern will represent Hungary and the Netherlands at the convention which will run from April 17-20. Oregon State University will host the four-day convention which is expected to draw delegates from over 100 colleges from throughout the Western U.S. and Canada.

Contemporary problems and issues confronting the United Nations will be discussed and decisions reached at the convention will be sent to the Secretary General of the United Nations.

More Recycled Living

Gibson. This common house will contain a large recreation room, a library, a large kitchen, and a root cellar.

"We really aren't too far along on our long-range plans," explained Folsom. "We just found the land in April of this year, began building in June, and we didn't move in until September. We hope to be entirely self-sufficient in five years but we should be doing quite well in three years once our gardens are established and we have some animals."

The two families have no electricity and receive their power from a generator.

"We were going to have electricity installed but that was before we found out that twelve of our largest trees would have to be cut down and that the power lines would pass through our meadow," said Gibson.

"We really don't even use the generator that much," added Folsom. "We have a light that runs from the generator but we prefer to use kerosene lamps."

Use Daylight

"We've adjusted our life styles so that we get as much use as possible out of the daylight hours," continued Gibson. "We get up at dawn and go to bed early. It is a little more difficult now that we're back on standard time. I have to admit that it's a nuisance to cook dinner by kerosene lamp."

The families are also combating "useless waste" through their use of compost toilets. These toilets are basically like a "privy" except that they employ two separate storage areas which are expected to last eight months to a year each. The wives frequently dump peat and kitchen waste into the chambers to aid the composting and a vent system has been installed which eliminates odors, Gibson said.

"When both sides are full, we hope to use the resulting fertilizer on the meadow to grow hay," she added.

The two homes are presently using wood stoves for heat but the Gibsons and Folsoms soon hope to install solar heating.

Solar Heat

"When we built the houses we put in large glass windows facing south so that we could get some heat from the sun," explained Folsom. "We also added 3 feet of rock under each house. When the system is finished, we will have solar collectors in front of the house that will collect the sun rays and pass them into the rock which will then radiate heat through the floor."

"I believe that there are only about ten such heating systems in the U.S.," added Gibson. "One is located in a dormitory at Boston's MIT where the weather is similar to ours and their experiences with solar heating has been favorable."

Folsom and Gibson also hope to eventually construct a methane digester. This digester will convert animal and human waste into a natural gas that they will use for cooking and for "other gasoline related jobs," she added.

"It takes a lot of work to live like this," said Folsom. "It also takes a lot of time and patience to paw through actual junk looking for something worth recycling but it is very rewarding."

"It is a very relaxing, enjoyable life," concluded Gibson. "We have no regrets that we left Cheney. In fact, we only wish we would have done it two or three years earlier."

Black Studies Classes Listed

Six black studies courses are offered winter quarter, according to Joseph Franklin, black studies professor.

The courses are Black American History, Harlem Renaissance, Black Political Awareness, Ethnic Art, Swahili and Black Culture.

Franklin emphasized the history course for both black and white students.

"Contributions of minorities are studied in this course," Franklin said, "with the study designed to bring out hidden facts that have been forgotten. Today America is struggling to maintain herself in the image she has proclaimed. Through historical awareness of all groups we can hope to further this American dream."

The black studies program is just beginning and may graduate its first student this June, Franklin said. The first expected graduate, Mark Willington, is also a student in elementary education.

Energy Crisis Discussed at Seminar

By Ralph Perkins
Contributing Writer

A seminar intended to bring the news media up to date on the energy crisis was held Monday night at the Washington Water Power Auditorium.

Opinions voiced at the seminar, which was jointly sponsored by WWP and EWSC, included that of Dr. Frank Nichol, director of the environmental studies program at Eastern, who said "By all predictions, we're in trouble." Glen Nogle, superintendent of power operations at WWP, who feels that "The area (Pacific Northwest) isn't in as bad a shortage as predicted."

The program began with a slide presentation by WWP President, W.J. Satre, outlining "The Energy Problem in Perspective." The presentation included a close look at future supplies of crude oil, specifically from Alaska, and dealt with predictions of increased oil by 1985—as high as 50 per cent more than we are now using.

R.W. Anderson, engineering planning supervisor, WWP, discussed possible alternatives to fossil fuels as an energy source. Anderson stressed development of nuclear power as a cheap, practical power source, while discounting some others such as geothermal and solar power and the use of a proposed five-hundred foot windmill to generate electricity.

R.E. McCarthy, manager of a surface coal mine affiliated with WWP located near Centralia, Wash., stressed the importance of coal as a power source in the years to come. He emphasized that there are sufficient coal deposits to last about 300 years and that coal mining does not have to destroy the environment in the mine area.

Following a coffee break, a panel discussion was held with 12 members answering questions from the audience. The questions ranged from how hard the energy crisis will hit Spokane to what is in store for the distant future.

Charles Gage, visiting assistant professor of physics, EWSC, said, "If nuclear fusion is perfected as an energy source, it will mean nearly free energy, and an infinitely rich nation. What are the implications of an infinite energy supply?"

Henry Kass, professor of political science, EWSC, said "We're talking about the end of the 'cowboy culture,' the end of an unexhaustable resources."

Another question raised by the panel is the fact that very few people, including those in positions of influence, know exactly what the energy shortage is all about. Thus, the first problem in the energy crisis is defining the crisis.

Dr. Albert Burke, KREM News, outlined the general tendency toward the noncommittal when asked to give a two-minute summary of his opinions as the only member of the news media on the panel. Said Burke: "I'd rather not."

Alumni Budget To Be Investigated By AS

A committee has been appointed by the AS Legislature to investigate the Alumni's Association budget.

Frank Marksman at the Nov. 14 meeting moved that a committee be appointed for a complete and thorough investigation of the alumni budget. Legislator Eric Burd then moved to add a friendly amendment to the motion to name Marksman as head of the committee. The motion passed.

The Alumni Association currently receives 75 cents per student per quarter.

Bank Donates Cushions

The Spokane and Eastern Branch of the Seattle-First National Bank has donated 2,000 cushions to Eastern's athletic department, Dr. Peggy Gazette, HPE professor, said this week.

The cushions are now on sale at the HPE building and will also be sold at basketball games. Proceeds from the sale will go to the women's athletic department and the Associated Students. The cushions cost $1.

CHEAP SHOTS

by Butch Brown — Sports Editor

About five weeks ago when Eastern's gridiron slate stood at 1-4, I made the following statement:

"With the pigskin season half over, Coach John Massengale's Eagles have found their way into the Evergreen Conference cellar and even the most optimistic followers would agree that their remaining schedule doesn't favor them for getting out by season's end."

Words Didn't Taste Too Bad

Sportswriters sometimes have to eat their words and I swallowed mine faithfully this morning along with the usual strawberries-on-toast. But I really didn't mind it at all. Reason? For the first time in five years, Eastern has gained something that's been sorely needed around here: recruiting power. And not exclusively for the football program either. Schools that build a strong name in one program tend to find the recruiting trail a lot less rockier in other areas [UCLA, for example].

The Eagles four game win streak that led to a 5-4 season mark may have also saved Massengale's job. Now I'm not saying that he was on his way out had the squad won a fewer number of games than they did. It's just that coaches who don't produce winners can often be seen riding away into the sunset to live a life of seclusion in Retirement City, USA. I doubt that it would have happened here at Eastern, however, with apathy being what it is, and all.

John Massengale
First Winning Season

Defense Was Devastating

A quick peek back at the final four contests clearly suggests a defensive takeover that turned the whole season around. Beginning with the final quarter of the Central Washington encounter at Ellensburg, the Eagles' defensive unit tightened and did not allow a score for 15 consecutive quarters. The offense, meanwhile, scored 3, 10, 13 and 17 points to provide victories over Portland State, Whitworth, Oregon Tech and College of Idaho. Those figures may not make you unexplainably delirious, but they won ballgames. And that, sports fans, is what it's all about.

Graduation Wins Again

Massengale will lose 10 out of the starting 22 players to graduation this year. Unfortunately, six of those are defensive stalwarts, including three of the "big four." And linebackers like Al Bushnell are once-in-a-decade types. "Bush" earned a black helmet three years running for achieving 15 or more "hash marks" and missed by only one in his rookie year.

Although the offense sustains only four losses, three of those positions scored all of Eastern's points this year. Tight end and kicker Scott Garske appears to be headed for a pro tryout. Quarterback Mike Hermesen and flanker Steve Farrington will depart. Dale Birchler, the bruising fullback who led the Eagles in rushing despite being part of a ground game that didn't score one single point this year, is also graduating.

What lies ahead for Massengale's gridiron forces next year can only be guesswork at this time. But it doesn't require a computer-like mind to see that this better be a damn good recruiting campaign.

Four Earn All-Star Honors

By Butch Brown
Sports Editor

Four Eastern football stand-outs were named to the 1973 All-Evergreen Conference football squad. Five other Eagles were afforded honorable mention recognition.

Seniors Al Bushnell, Scott Garske and Doug Orcutt along with sophomore Mike Richter earned first team recognition in balloting by EvCo coaches at Portland, Ore. Nov. 19. For Garske, a 6-4, 240 pound tight end from Spokane, and Bushnell, a 6-1 205 pound linebacker out of Deer Park, it marked a repeat selection from the 1972 all-star team.

Coach John Massengale said he was very happy about the selections, but added, "I think we might have been better represented had we won more conference games. I wish we could have played most of our EvCo contests toward the end of the year."

The Eagles finished the campaign with a four-game win streak but played only one conference tilt in that span and had to settle for a fifth place finish with a 2-4 record.

Massengale made the following comments about each selection:

GARSKE: "What can you say about a guy who's done everything for you? Scott was the leading tight end in the conference for three years and has been looked at quite thoroughly by the pros. His biggest improvement was his blocking and he also led the team in scoring this year."

BUSHNELL: "Here's a guy that will be missed an awful lot. He's a real team leader and one of the hardest hitters to play in this league for a long time. Al possesses good speed and just did a super job for us all four years."

RICHTER: "Mike will be back next year and should be the best all-around athlete on the squad. He's probably the finest run-support secondary man we have. In addition, Mike topped the league in kickoff returns and tied for second in interceptions with five."

ORCUTT: Doug came to us as a linebacker and we moved him to defensive tackle where he did an outstanding job. He has good football knowledge and his greatest asset is his ability to read plays. One word sums him up: dependable."

Skiing Agenda Detailed

Eastern offers a ski program this winter. Program coordinator Dr. Robert Barr said the following classes will be offered:

GRADUATED LENGTH METHOD (GLM): The fastest and most pleasurable method of learning to ski. GLM is designed to teach beginners how to ski parallel in four to six weeks. Classes meet on Friday from 3 to 5 p.m., beginning Jan. 11, on Snowblaze. The fee includes skis, boots, poles, lifts, and lessons. PE 125 (1) Section 22. Six lessons for $55.

SKIING INTERMEDIATE: This class is designed for those who want to get rid of that stem and learn a polished parallel turn. Classes meet on Friday from 5 to 7 p.m. beginning Jan. 11, on Snowblaze. The fee includes all lift facilities and lessons. Students must furnish their own equipment. PE 125 (1) Section 23. Eight lessons for $49.

SKIING-ADVANCED: Designed for those who want to perfect their parallel turns and learn Wedeln or jet turns. Classes meet on Friday from 3 to 5 p.m. beginning Jan. 11 on Snowblaze. The fee includes lift facilities and lessons. PE 125 (1) Section 24. Eight lessons for $49.

EXHIBITION AND FREE-STYLE: Really get it on by doing jet turns off mogels, short swing, Wedeln and ski ballet. Classes meet on Friday from 5 to 7 p.m., beginning Jan. 11, on Snowblaze. Includes lifts and lessons. PE 125 (1) Section 25. Eight lessons for $49.

CROSS COUNTRY AND MOUNTAINEERING: Experience the enjoyment of cross country skiing and winter mountaineering in the wilderness area of Mt. Spokane. Lessons include an overnight backpack trip on skis and instruction on winter survival. Classes meet on Friday from 5 to 7 p.m., beginning Jan. 11, on Snowblaze. Includes lessons, lift facility and the overnigher. PE 125 (1) Section 26. Six lessons for $21.

GLM BEGINNER SKIING: This is designed for the beginner that doesn't have equipment and would like to learn to ski the fast way. You will ski parallel from the very first lesson. Classes meet Saturday from 10:30 to 12 p.m. and from 1:30 to 3 p.m., beginning Jan. 12, at 49 degrees North. Includes skis, boots, poles, lifts and lessons. PE 125 (1) Section 27. Eight lessons for $58.

GLM ADVANCED SKIING: For those with their own equipment. Classes meet on Saturday from 10:30 to 12 p.m. and from 1:30 to 3 p.m. at 49 degrees North. Includes all equipment for the first two days, lifts and lessons. PE 125 (1) Section 28. Eight lessons for $49.

BEGINNER AND ADVANCED GLM LATE SESSION: Designed for those who wish to continue their lessons or for those who couldn't enroll for the first session. Classes meet on Saturday from 10:30 to 12 p.m. and from 1:30 to 3 p.m., beginning on Feb. 9, at 49 degrees North. PE 125 (1) Section 29. Eight lessons for $49.

In addition to the above classes, there are plans for a ski instructor class for those who are interested in becoming instructors. Jim Black is coordinating this program and anyone interested should contact him.

For those interested in any of the above classes, a meeting is scheduled on Tuesday, Jan. 8, at 4 p.m. in PE CB 103. The meeting concerns transportation and organization. For further info, contact Dr. Barr, department of physical education, (509) 356-2461.

J. V. Hoopsters Quick, Talented

With speed and quickness the key, Eastern Washington's junior varsity basketball team will officially open their 1973-74 campaign Saturday when they host Fairchild in the Memorial Fieldhouse at 5:15 p.m.

The JV's follow next Tuesday with a match-up against Lewis and Clark State beginning at 5:15 p.m. in the Fieldhouse. Then traveling to Coeur d'Alene on Wednesday, Eastern will play one of their toughest rivals of the season when they hook up with North Idaho Junior College. North Idaho has gained a wide-spread reputation for coming up with nationally ranked junior college teams with an air of regularity.

While JV Coach Jack State is optimistic, he is understandably somewhat saddened at the same time by the fact that five talented freshman are currently on the varsity. But two of those, 6-5 Chris Brown and 6-8 Brian Twietmeyer, are expected to see their share of action on the JV squad which could put the icing on the cake.

Sharpshooting Sam Martinez, who was the leading scorer in the Border League's small division last year, gives the Eagles a talented outside attack evidenced by his impressive play in last week's alumni game. Martinez is joined at the guard spot by defensive standout Ed Water from Los Angeles.

Rounding out the starting team at the present time is center Matt Westman from Longview, Wash., Doug Howell of Arlington, Wash., and Bill Gablehouse from Centralia, Wash. Howell has displayed tough, aggressive play as a forward while Gablehouse has a sensational touch from the outside.

"Once we get our defense together we'll be tough," noted State regarding the team's progress to date. He added, "They've still got a lot to learn, but they're shaping up well."

So while the junior varsity is rounding into a team to be dealt with this season, they are also gaining the valuable and necessary experience needed for varsity play in future years.

Winter Activities Announced

An attempt is currently underway to create more participation in HPE activities and "Further the physical state of each individual while having a good time."

HPE instructor and gymnastics coach Jack Benson said recently that most students do not realize they can raise their health level and take care of their college requirements at the same time. "A student can substitute five hours of PE (any class of his/her choice) for five hours of the general college requirements (Humanities, Social Sciences, etc.)," Benson said. "It's explained in the college bulletin, but most students do not fully understand the options available to them."

He further went on to explain that the HPE facilities at EWSC are among the finest in the Northwest and for the enjoyment of everyone, regardless of class standing or athletic ability.

Below is a sample of the activity courses offered winter quarter. Check the winter quarter announcement of classes for the complete schedule. Numbers ending in 120 indicate women only; 125 co-ed classes and 130 men only.

Cagers Handle Alumni; Host Montana Saturday

The 1973-74 contingent of "Screamin' Eagle" basketball players experienced their first taste of full-game action Saturday night as they turned back an alumni team 80-63 at Memorial Fieldhouse.

Coach Jerry Krause's cagers open their campaign Saturday at home against a talented Western Montana five. Lewis and Clark State, a team which Eastern handled twice last year, comes to town Monday night. Tip-off time for both non-league encounters will be 7:30 p.m.

Sophomore guard Rocky Heutink canned 8 of 12 field goals and added one free throw to pace the Eagles with 17 points. Shooting a commendable 43 per cent from the field, the varsity ran up a 46-34 halftime lead and coasted home the second half.

The alumni squad was cool from the field (31 per cent) and could not control the fast-breaking offense. Jack State, a former Savage All-American and current JV coach, tossed in 19 counters to take game scoring honors.

Defensively, Krause's squad did a fine job against the taller alumni team as they held a 42-35 rebound edge and used their advantage for quick outlet passes. "I felt the fine job we did on the boards helped us dominate the game," Krause commented. "At one point we led by nearly 30 points."

Rebounding and pressure defense will again be the name of the game Saturday. Coach Casey Keltz will field a veteran outfit that stands 6-4, 6-5 and 6-9 on the front line. The Bulldogs have good speed and display no apparent weaknesses. W. Montana has been chosen as co-favorites to capture the Frontier Conference title this year and have never finished lower than second in the past four years.

'By Jupiter' Is Summer Theatre Fine Comedy Players Sought

By T. A. Atkinson
Staff Writer

"By Jupiter," the Rodgers and Hart musical comedy chosen for a U.S.O. winter tour of Europe, opened its run last Friday evening in the College Theater.

Tickets for the first performance were almost sold-out. The show, directed by Dr. R. Boyd Devin, Chairman of the Drama Department, features Linda Fahlgren as Hippolyta, the Amazon queen; and Larry Hunt as Sapiens, her subject and husband.

The theme of "By Jupiter" is dominance and role-playing by the sexes. In the Amazon tribe the women are dominant. The Greek society, in contrast, maintains the male as master.

Casting for the play was good; the actors' physical dimensions and demeanors fit their roles well. Vocally, the performers corresponded to their parts equally well.

Although undermined by indistinct tape-recorded music, the singing was good. Choreography was simple and rather scanty. Predictably, the acting was quality work.

Set design and construction along with costuming was outstanding, colorful, interesting and excellently made.

Date of departure for remote European bases is January 18, 1974. The company includes such Amazons as Julie Scholer, Madine Balabanis and Robin Johnson. Also anticipating the tour are Terry Croskrey and Scott Wallace, the main Grecian characters.

"By Jupiter" was definitely enjoyable and good. But it was not spectacular, which one could expect of a show chosen for a U.S.O. tour. The production is not at fault here. The choice of material to be produced is the weak point. "By Jupiter" is a fine comedy but is uncontemporary and rather empty of any real intrigue or message.

The curtain goes up at 7:30 for "By Jupiter's" remaining EWSC run, tonight through December 8, excluding December 2. Admission is free for college students, $1 for the general public.

Romero Family To Appear With Spokane Symphony

The Romero Family, known on the international concert scene as "The Royal Family of the Guitar," will appear in concert with the Spokane Symphony Orchestra on Dec. 11 at 8:15 p.m. in the Fox Theatre.

Illusionist To Appear

Andre Kole, illusionist and inventor of magical effects, will present a program on Dec. 5 at 8 p.m. in Showalter auditorium.

Kole has performed to over 75,000 people this year across the U.S. and in foreign countries with Campus Crusade for Christ, the organization which is sponsoring his EWSC appearance.

Admission charge for the program is $1.50.

Johnny Otis Show Rhythm and Blues

Johnny Otis Show is the name and rhythm and blues is their game, set for a smokin' night of music Dec. 2 at the PUB multi-purpose room.

Festival-type seating is planned so show-goers can sit back and listen or dance, according to Curt Stimson, chairman of the Student Activities Review Board (SARB).

Otis has been in the R & B business since the 1950s and lately he and his 18-member show have been winning high acclaim on the college and nightclub circuit. Recent college gigs drawing enthusiastic crowds include the University of California at Irvine and San Diego and California Polytechnic State University.

Otis who plays guitar, bass, drums and saxophone, is the only white member of the show. Other entertainers performing with him include the Three Ton of Joy, three large ladies who like to sing and rock away; the Otis-ettes, three foxy soul singer-dancers; Delmar Evans on vocals and Eddie Vinson, alto sax and vocals.

"Without a doubt, the Johnny Otis Show will be the best rhythm and blues, rock and roll show to hit Eastern," said Bruce Murray, assistant director of student activities.

Murray reminded show-goers that the PUB's seating capacity is limited at 1,000 so it might be best to get advance tickets. Price is $1.50 advance, $2 on the day of the show.

Self-defense Show Christmas Concert Set For Coliseum

Kung fu, karate, aikido, tai chi chuan, judo and jiu jitsu will be featured in "The Oriental World of Self-Defense" to be held at the Spokane Coliseum on Dec. 2 at 8 p.m. Tickets for the event are $3, $4 and $5 and may be purchased at M&M Tickets, Northtown Music, Valley Record Rack, Bon Marche and Jacoy's.

Russell Readies

Leon Russell will perform in concert Dec. 5 at Seattle. The concert is set for 8 p.m. at the University of Washington's Hec Edmundson Pavilion.

Wind Recordings Tingle The Soul

By Leon Bowsky
Music Reviewer
"The Wind Harp" - United Artists UAS 9963.

Unusual but good describes "The Wind Harp."

The album is recorded sounds of wind blowing through a sculpture built on a barren hill. It tingles, it lifts and it moves the soul like the wind. It sounds more like the wind on some unknown planet but has the same earthy quality of a prairie wind.

To call it astral transmission music is too far out to render meaning. The changes made by the harp's music are as subtle as layers of skin. The album is a double LP at the price of a single.

The wind harp took a year and one half for a 21-year-old man to build. It is made of wood and steel and is the size of a small ark. After it was built, the man left it to the wind to stand and sing alone, to fall at the end of its time. The builder has never returned to her.

"She curled up in my lap to listen to the wind, singing forth the dawn. Daddy, who makes that song?"

Guidance Available

Industrial Education and Technology students have an "open invitation" to receive counseling at the department's offices.

Dr. Glen O. Fuglsby, department chairman, said Industrial Ed. has always offered such guidance but wanted to "go on record" and remind students of the services.

Eastern's percussion ensemble, the Percussion Pops, will present a Christmas concert Dec. 14 at the Music Building Recital Hall.

Music professor Martin Zyskowski is the group's conductor.

Band To Perform

EWSC Stage Band will present a concert on Dec. 6 at noon in the PUB multi-purpose room.

James Albert will conduct the concert. Admission is free.

Musical Productions Are 'Free...A Fair Price'

By T. A. Atkinson
Staff Writer

Musical productions of "The Man on the Bearskin Rug" and "Tommy" were recently presented by the EWSC Music Department.

The first production, "The Man on the Bearskin Rug", was a one-act comedy which came off as little more than a simple, flat farce.

Harlan Henderson sang the part of Henry, a meek fellow who is hen-pecked by his fiancée, who was portrayed by Linda Stredwick. Karen Olson played Mrs. Lemoine, a woman who gives Henry a bearskin rug to enhance his charm. The production was directed by Karen Noble.

The singers generally lacked verve and I found the majority of vocals to be quite dull. Occasionally songs, however, such as "The Acid Queen" performed by Lori Johnson were above par and Sheri Grubb was excellent in her rendition of "Smash the Mirror."

The choreography was excellent. An outside band, "Mr. Goodbar", played an instrumental similar to the original score. The band performed well but did not sound united with the vocalists—possible because the singers had only rehearsed with the band four times before opening night.

The musical production of "Tommy" fared somewhat better than "Man on a bearskin Rug." It was the story of a deaf, dumb and blind boy who explores the cause of his isolation, his cure and his eventual relapse. The production was directed by John Duenow.

Throughout the production, images were projected onto screens above the stage which corresponded to the songs. These images were quite effective and enjoyable except when cast members stepped in the beam.

Scene changes in "Tommy" were also unintentionally visible. They were bearable between long songs but all too noticeable between the shorter ones.

As the opera neared its end, part of the cast penetrated the audience and brought a few spectators back on stage with them. The gimmick might have worked had the cast related to the pitiable ones they dragged on stage. But, alas, they danced and sang away ignoring their solid stooges who sat rock-like, not knowing what to do. They sat on stage up to and during curtain call, at which time the cast, hand in hand, virtually walked over them. The curtain then fell—unfortunately onto several confused persons.

Both productions had distinct amateur airs about them. Set design and construction were good in the first presentation but skimpy in "Tommy." The lighting was good in both productions but sound quality was disappointing.

Approximately 150 people attended the opening night. Admission was free...a fair price.

Agencies To Recruit

The Peace Corps and VISTA, both ACTION agencies, will begin their first joint recruiting drive of the year on the EWSC campus Monday.

The agencies are seeking seniors for volunteer programs that begin this Spring and next summer in 63 overseas countries and throughout the U.S. Representatives will be located in the PUB from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily through Friday, Dec. 7.

New History Courses

History department will offer several new courses winter quarter.

Four of the courses should be of special interest, according to Lynn Triplett, history professor. They include "Stalin's Russia," "Bible and Archaeology: Old Testament," "Japan by Literature: Traditional," and "Native American History to 1865."

Special Ed. Group Meets Here Today

Joy Bratvold, field coordinator for the Associated Special Education Instructional Materials Center (ASEIMC), will be the special speaker at today's meeting of the Council for Exceptional Children (CEC).

The local chapter of CEC also recently elected officers. They are: Brian Midles, president; Joline Pitman, vice-president; Karyl Ulvin, secretary; Laura Newitzki, treasurer; and Georgeanne Green, publicity chairman. Dr. Don Hunsaker is adviser for the group.

André Kole

André Kole is one of the World's heading illusionists and is recognized as one of the foremost inventors of magical effects.

André Kole's appearances have taken him to all fifty states and 60 countries of South America, Europe, Asia and Africa. He has also appeared on national television in over 40 countries and has given special appearances before presidents, ambassadors, and other civic and gov't officials. He recently returned from a 3 month trip to Asia.

For the past few years, Mr. Kole has devoted the major portion of his time to performing and speaking on the leading college campuses. At the present time he probably speaks to more college and university students throughout the world than any other person. So far this year he has performed and spoken to over 75 million people through personal and television appearances.

Mr. Kole's tours are made in conjunction with Campus Crusade for Christ, International. Active on hundreds of American campuses and in more than half the major countries of the world, this interdenominational Christian student movement is designed to share the relevance of Christ as the lasting solution to the needs of the world.

Mr. Kole's program features a full stage production dealing with the fantasy and reality of the supernatural world. Is communication with the dead possible? Do the dead return? What does the future hold? André Kole will present some of his findings to these and other questions regarding the supernatural.

His performance will be challenging, thought provoking, entertaining and inspiring. Appearing on campus, 8 p.m. Dec. 5th, Showalter Aud. $1.50.

Health Service Available Here

Spokane County Health District recently opened its Southwest County Health Center at 115 College Ave., Cheney.

The center provides such personal health services as communicable disease control, immunization, venereal disease diagnosis and treatment and children and youth programs. The center is open Monday through Friday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. for those making advance appointments (235-6327).

The center also provides family planning which includes information, education, counseling and medical services for contraceptive, infertility and pregnancy verification.

The children and youth program includes total health appraisal of a child's behavioral, physical and emotional development with appropriate referral for follow-up treatment.

NAIC Plans Told For Indian Week

The Native American Indian Club (NAIC) will feature speakers, music, a men's basketball tournament, pow wows and many other activities during Indian week to be held here Feb. 11-17, Lenora Buck, NAIC president, said Tuesday.

Maxine Henrietta Norris, Miss Indian America, will also be at EWSC for the duration of the event, Buck said.

The NAIC is currently recruiting speakers among tribal leaders throughout Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, said Buck. The organization is also advertising the event throughout the U.S., she said.

Several drum groups will provide musical entertainment for the event, Buck said, including a concert-dance. The NAIC is negotiating with "Red Bone" to perform for the event, she said.

In Nearly 75% Of Classes

Professors Rated High

Instructors rated a B or better average (3.0 to 4.0) in nearly 75 per cent of the 400 Eastern classes evaluated last spring with results published this month in "The Compass."

Of the 400 class evaluations published, 292 professors were given an overall rating 3.0 or better. The remaining professors by and large rated towards the top of the 2.0 to 3.0 bracket.

Less than a half dozen instructors were rated in the 1.0 to 2.0 range, with the lowest overall rating a 1.3 out of a class of twelve.

Straight A (4.0) overall ratings were given to seven professors with five or more students evaluating their performances. Several other Eastern professors received perfect ratings but had less than five students taking part in the evaluation.

The seven receiving perfect ratings, including two professors with perfect ratings in two courses, were:

--Norman C. Boulanger, drama department, Scene Design, eight students, and Stage Lighting, eight students;

--Lynn G. Triplett, history department, Introduction to Asian Civilization, five students, and Colonial Origins of the United States, seven students;

--Richard E. Hoover, journalism department, Seminar in Journalism Problems, nine students;

--Dr. William L. Maxson, music department, Form and Analysis, eight students;

--Perry C. Higman, foreign language department, Advanced Grammar and Composition (Spanish), eight students;

--Barbara Y. Kran, art department, Metal Forms, five students;

--Dr. Tsung-Hua Lin, economics department, Introduction to Econometrics, five students.

Four professors received overall ratings averaging less than C (1.0 to 2.0) in classes with ten or more students. The low ratings were given to two instructors in the English department and one in the business administration and health, physical education departments.

Two hundred copies of "The Compass" were published with $1,400 funded to the Student-Faculty Relations Committee (SFRC) from the Associated Students. The $7 booklets are available for student use in all departmental offices and residence halls, as well as in the library, Associated Students office and Showalter Hall.

According to Nancy Knott, chairperson of the SFRC, the booklets are to be used as a tool for students in registering for winter quarter classes. The evaluation does not purport to represent conclusive information about courses or teaching ability, Knott said.

Minority Money Bill Approved

The AS Legislature at their Nov. 20 meeting approved a bill that would raise over $9,000 to be used by the Ethnic Minority Social Activity Fund. The legislature will appropriate the equivalent of fifty cents per student per quarter that will be put into the fund.

Monies received will be divided between the Black Student Union receiving 41 per cent, the Native American Indian Club receiving 37 per cent and the Foreign Student Organization which will receive 22 per cent.

The budgets of the Ethnic Minority Social Activity Fund will be considered as AS budgets and will be managed by the AS business manager. Money allocated to the minority activities must, however, be spent on social activities that are open to all students of Eastern, the bill read.

The legislators also passed a bill establishing bulletin board on the first floor of the PUB. Purpose of the bulletin board is to communicate to students information on AS activities and events, legislators, committee meetings and AS officers.

Frat Donates Money

Alpha Phi Omega donated $400 to the national wheelchair games which are to be held here in June.

The $400 check was presented during half time at a wheelchair basketball game held here Nov. 20.

Larry Richards, president of Alpha Phi Omega, said the money donated was raised two weeks ago when the fraternity raffled a hindquarter of beef, two turkeys and two canned hams.

Richards said the raffle raised over $700 and part of the money was used to buy turkeys that were distributed to needy student families along with canned goods collected in a food drive Nov. 17.

Board and Room Costs Remain At Current Rate

By Rob Allen
Staff Writer

Due to rising food costs board and room rates for students in two of the six state colleges are in the process of being increased while the rates at EWSC are expected to stay at their current rate for the remainder of the 1973-74 academic year.

Students who live in dorms at the University of Washington will be expected to pay $15 more than the published rate for winter quarter and $30 more than the published rate for spring quarter. Students who have contracted to eat only two meals a day at the U will experience a $12.50 increase for winter and a $25 increase for spring. Administrators at the University made the announcement Nov. 16.

Students at WSU may be facing a retroactive increase in their food service costs. The director of food service at WSU said he was contemplating a retroactive $15 increase for fall semester and a $15 increase for spring term. Administrators are waiting at the Pullman University for the October Income and Expense report before making the final decision.

EWSC director of Auxiliary Enterprises, Fred Heinemann, said as of right now he foresees no increases in board and room rates during the year because the budget seems to be holding out. According to Heinemann, meat prices are back to spring level and unless a drastic change occurs in over-all food costs there will be no reason for a change.

Heinemann noted that Eastern has the lowest board rates for any state institution with a 20-meal-a-week food plan. According to figures from Heinemann's office, EWSC students are currently paying $180 for 20 meals a week. Western Washington State College students pay $205 per quarter and receive 21 meals per week. A CWSC student pays $188 in food costs per quarter and receives only 15 meals per week.

Dorm residents at the U of W can opt for either a 19 meal week for $188 or a 14 meal week for $163 during the quarter. There are several other small meal plans offered at the U to students who don't eat a full schedule of meals.

At WSU, where classes are held on the semester system, students can purchase 20 meals per week at a cost of $202 per semester. WSU students can also take advantage of smaller meal plans including a 15 meal per week plan that costs students $188 per semester.

Heinemann said that it is the goal of the EWSC housing services to keep room and board rates as low as possible. He stated that the lower costs may result in students standing in line from time to time in Tawanka Commons but he said that he feels students would prefer the wait to higher costs.

MED SCHOOL ADMISSION PROBLEMS?
EuroMed may offer RX via overseas training
For the session starting Fall, 1974, EuroMed will assist qualified American students in gaining admission to recognized overseas medical schools.
And that's just the beginning.
Since the language barrier constitutes the preponderate difficulty in succeeding at a foreign school, the EuroMed program also includes an intensive 12 week medical and conversational language course, mandatory for all students. Five hours daily, 5 days per week (12-16 weeks) the course is given in the country where the student will attend medical school.
In addition, EuroMed provides students with a 12 week intensive cultural orientation program, with American students now studying medicine in that particular country serving as counselors.
Senior or graduate students currently enrolled in an American university are eligible to participate in the EuroMed program.

The College-In-Residence-Volunteer Program (CIRV) now has 13 openings for students interested in assisting Lakeland Village staff in training the mentally retarded in basic social, recreational, educational and physical skills. Terry Hartman, Volunteer Services Coordinator, announced recently.

Students will receive free meals and housing in exchange for service, Hartman said.

For an appointment or more information, contact Volunteer Services, Lakeland Village by calling 299-3131 or by writing to Hartman, Box 200, Lakeland Village, Medical Lake, Wa. 99022.

Dressler Hall Has The Spirit

Dressler Hall residents recently received a cash award for "active participation during Homecoming weekend" from Eastern's six-woman cheerleading staff.

In honoring the homecoming spirit of the dorm, the cheerleaders asked that the residents apply the money to an all-dorm function sometime during the academic year.

Cheerleaders are Cindy Tisaw, Melody Truitt, Becky Eiland, Connie Crawford, Janet Jansen and Brenda Bayman. Allen Ogdon, dean of student services, is the group's chauffeur.

Says New York Times Newsman

President Too Powerful

By Jim Baker
Editor

United States government will become an authoritarian regime if presidential powers are not permanently curbed, the newsman who first obtained the Pentagon Papers said in a speech at Eastern.

Neil Sheehan, chief of the Washington Bureau of The New York Times, spoke to an audience of about 150 persons Nov. 19 at Showalter Auditorium, marking his second appearance here as a Lyceum speaker.

The executive branch has become a centralized state in the European sense of the word and is now the state in America, Sheehan said.

"The constitutional system of checks and balances envisioned by the founding fathers as written into the Constitution no longer exists in fact because of power that has accrued to the executive branch," Sheehan said.

Sheehan said that some people trace the roots of the modern American presidency of the 1960s and 70s to Franklin D. Roosevelt's coming of power in 1932 and the New Deal. Sheehan said he believes the increased presidential powers and "bureaucratic revolution" occurred in this country after World War II.

The creation for the first time of large, permanent organizations including the military services and intelligence operations were institutions which "prior to World War Two had never existed in America," Sheehan said, "and since their coming into existence, the presidency has acquired a bureaucratic power which it never had in the past."

Sheehan called Watergate "a natural step from the development of the post World War Two presidency" and "only a temporary set-back to the executive branch unless permanent reforms are taken."

"I don't think you can explain Watergate simply by saying that it all resulted from the evil character of Richard Nixon. Mr. Nixon's character has something to do with the timing of the Watergate affair, but it just as well could have happened to a Democratic president."

Sheehan said the best example of executive power in this country is the Indo-China war. The war resulted from "decisions taken usually in secret by a relatively small group of men at the top of the executive branch of our government," Sheehan said, including the Gulf of Tonkin resolution written three months before the incident.

Sheehan said Congress passed the Gulf of Tonkin resolution which authorized President Johnson to take "whatever armed action deemed necessary to protect Southeast Asia" under false pretenses.

"Yes, our destroyers (the Maddox and the Turner Joy) were attacked in the Gulf of Tonkin, but the President of the United States (Johnson) may well have provoked those attacks."

Sheehan said that through the deception the Johnson administration was able to "alter a fundamental process of our government and circumvent the Constitution and war-making powers Congress has defined by the Constitution."

"The president can take whatever limits necessary to protect 'national security'. There are no legal limits, only political limits," Sheehan said. "What pleases the prince has power of law. The executive branch no longer exists to serve needs of the republic, but exists to serve its own interests."

New Focus Editor Sought

Applications are now being accepted for editor of "The Focus," Eastern's daily information flyer.

New editor will begin his duties beginning winter quarter, replacing Don Pearsall who resigned last week.

Interested persons should contact The Easterner and set up an interview appointment. "The Focus" editor is a paid position.

Morrison Chair Is Hot Seat

A day in Cheney Justice Court Tuesday resulted in $50 fines and suspended 10 day jail sentences for two EWSC students who were convicted of the attempted theft of a lounge chair from Morrison Hall.

Sentenced were Michael G. Anderson, 22, and Robert A. Watson, 21, both of 1602 Third Street in Cheney. Also arrested but acquitted in Tuesday's court was George W. Jacoby, 22, of the same address.

Campus Safety authorities said they received a call about 9 p.m. on Nov. 13 from a resident of the Tracy Apartments behind Morrison informing them that a group of young, long-haired students were taking a lounge chair from that dorm.

A bulletin immediately went out over the police radio. Off-duty Campus Safety Director, Al Shaw, monitored the call on his home radio while at his home in Cheney.

Driving through Cheney, Shaw spotted a car matching the description of that given over the police radio. In the open trunk of the car Shaw spotted a large chair.

Shaw apprehended the suspects at the corner of Third and Vine in Cheney, informed them of their rights, and placed the three room-mates under arrest. Also in the car were two female residents of Morrison Hall. They were questioned and released.

When questioned in court, the three males told Judge Jack Grabb that they had intended to return the chair to Morrison.

The two convicted students each received $200 fines with all but $50 suspended plus a $4 court cost was imposed. The two were also released from a 10-day jail sentence with the stipulation that if they ever appeared in Cheney Justice Court again they would have to serve out the entire 10-day sentence.

Members of Theta Chi Upsilon report that a color TV was stolen from their house on the night of Nov. 16.

A student in Sutton Hall called campus officials Nov. 19 to report that four one-hundred dollar bills had been taken from his room sometime between 4 and 8 p.m. There were also $200 worth of hand tools taken from Cheney Hall last week.
